

I HAVE A KINGDOM

STEPHEN NDEGWA

A Walking King

I HAVE A KINGDOM

DAYSTAR UNIVERSITY
LIBRARY
P.O. Box 44400 - 00100 NAIROBI
TEL: 0709972000

STEPHEN NDEGWA

A WALKING KING

Contents

Dedication.....	v
Acknowledgement.....	vii
Introduction.....	ix
WELCOME TO MY KINGDOM.....	17
Reflections.....	21
THE LOST KINGDOM.....	23
Reflections.....	30
LOST BUT FOUND KINGDOM.....	32
Reflections.....	38
MY KINGDOM IS PART OF THE GREATER KINGDOM.....	40
Reflections.....	47
LOVE, PEACE, AND JOY ARE PART OF MY KINGDOM NOW AND FOREVER.....	49
Reflections.....	53
HELP IS ALWAYS AVAILABLE IN MY KINGDOM.....	55
Reflections.....	60
LOVE IS THE BASIS OF ALL KINGDOMS.....	62

Reflections	66
YOUR KINGDOM IS BASED ON YOUR BELIEFS	68
Reflections	72
EPILOGUE	74

"I have a kingdom" is a statement that one would expect to hear from a monarch: a reigning king. However, the author declares that we are all kings by birth, whether we are aware of this truth or not. We are called to consider how kingdoms get "lost" when children, born free and empowered become conditioned into patterns of fear. In a lost kingdom, one is not of aware who they are, and they do not know what is available for them to enjoy.

There is no other way to find the lost kingdom, other than going back to where we lost it; getting unstuck from the past. He explains how in lost kingdoms, kings live like beggars; bound by fear, guilt and shame in poverty and victim mentality and how we can regain the freedom of living consciously in the present, reigning over our kingdoms. The author explains how peace, love and joy are experienced by kings reigning consciously under the auspices of the Great King. He expounds how love is the basis of all kingdoms and how one's beliefs determine how one reigns in their kingdom and relates to other kings.

Any king who is fearful does not have the ability to take charge of their kingdom. Fear is the greatest obstacle when it comes to the full realization of one's kingdom and love is the key that leads to freedom and realization of one's kingdom. A clarion call resounds through the pages of this book: a call for every king to awaken, realize who they are and reign over their kingdoms in love.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

"I am because He is, and because He is, so I am." This is how Stephen Ndegwa describes himself. He sees himself as one with His Creator, who occupies every space, every time, and every state. He sees himself as an eternal living being, who is an instrument of love, healing, and life on earth. He is a lifetime seeker, curious, appreciative, and open-minded to learn as much as he can while on earth. He has no attachment to many things, has no possessiveness or defensiveness for he likes accepting things as they happen.

Stephen's main purpose on earth is to share love with everyone and everything through having loving thoughts and deeds towards them. He lives from an abundance attitude where he believes in giving all that he has been given because for him, giving is gaining. He facilitates learning individually and in groups where he likes helping people question what they think they know and hold dear to themselves. He is a believer that one can attain a heavenly experience here on earth. He believes he is a neighbor to everyone and sees no one as an enemy. He is forever grateful for he has found his function on earth, to forgive and be happy!