ABSTRACT

This is a report of an internship project which sought to conduct an appraisal of Nairobi Baptist Church Sunday school Programme to ascertain whether it has achieved desired aims and objectives. The report and recommendation therein are expected to help the church in her endeavor to attain the desired purpose for her Sunday School Programme. In arriving at this, several instruments were utilized including questionnaires, observation schedules, interviews, personal experience in teaching Sunday school and an analysis of the Sunday school teaching materials.

In the course of the appraisal it was found out that Nairobi Baptist Church has an active Sunday school programme which is seen as an important facet of the total church programme. The department has a structured administrative organization and there is a commendable use of appropriate teaching materials. Several recommendations were made in order to improve the Sunday school programme amongst which are, the writing of aims and objectives for the programme, formulation of guidelines for choosing Sunday school leaders, and a delineation of their responsibilities as well as the need for more Sunday school teachers' development programmes.
